A short history of United Arab Emirates

People have lived along this coast and in its oases for thousands of years, trading copper with Mesopotamia and the Indus Valley and farming dates with the help of underground water channels called falaj. Islam arrived in the 7th century. From the 1820s the coastal sheikhdoms signed a series of treaties with Britain and became known as the Trucial States. After Britain decided to leave the Gulf, six of them formed the United Arab Emirates in December 1971, and Ras Al Khaimah joined on 10 February 1972.

3200 BC The Hafit period begins

Around 3200 BC people began building beehive-shaped stone tombs on the slopes of Jebel Hafeet near today's Al Ain. The period is named after the mountain, and the tombs are part of a World Heritage Site.

2600 BC The Umm an-Nar culture flourishes

From about 2600 BC to 2000 BC people built large round tombs and towers, such as those at Hili in Al Ain, and traded copper from the Hajar Mountains. Sumerian texts speak of a land called Magan, which covered today's UAE and Oman.

AD 630 Islam reaches the coast

Islam is thought to have reached the region after the Prophet Muhammad sent a letter to the rulers of Oman in 630. Within a few years the peoples of the coast and the oases had become Muslim.

1761

The Qasr Al Hosn watchtower is built

A round watchtower was built on Abu Dhabi island to guard its only freshwater well. It later grew into a fort and palace, Qasr Al Hosn, the oldest stone building in the city of Abu Dhabi.

1793

The Al Nahyan move to Abu Dhabi

The ruling family of the Bani Yas tribe moved their residence from the Liwa Oasis in the desert to Abu Dhabi island on the coast, where pearling and fishing offered a living.

1820

The General Maritime Treaty

After British forces attacked Ras Al Khaimah, the rulers of the coast signed a maritime truce with Britain. The treaties that followed gave the area its English name, the Trucial States or Trucial Coast.

1833

The Al Maktoum settle in Dubai

Members of the Al Bu Falasah tribe left Abu Dhabi and settled on the creek at Dubai, led by Maktoum bin Butti and Obeid bin Saeed. The Al Maktoum family has ruled Dubai ever since.

1892

The Exclusive Agreement

The rulers agreed to deal with no foreign power except Britain, which in return promised to protect them. The Trucial States became, in effect, a British protectorate while keeping their own rulers.

1958

Oil is found at Umm Shaif

A drilling rig towed from Germany struck oil under Umm Shaif, an old pearl bed in the waters of Abu Dhabi. It was the first commercial oil find on the Trucial Coast, and exports began in 1962.

1968

Britain announces its withdrawal

In January 1968 the British government announced that it would end its treaties with the Gulf sheikhdoms and withdraw its forces by the end of 1971. The rulers began talks about forming a union.

1971

The United Arab Emirates is founded

On 2 December 1971 six emirates, Abu Dhabi, Dubai, Sharjah, Ajman, Umm Al Quwain and Fujairah, formed the United Arab Emirates. The date is celebrated every year as National Day. Bahrain and Qatar, which had taken part in the talks, became separate countries instead.

1972

Ras Al Khaimah joins the union

Ras Al Khaimah, the northernmost emirate, joined the federation on 10 February 1972, making it the seven emirates of today.

1981

The Gulf Cooperation Council is founded

The UAE was one of the six founding members of the Gulf Cooperation Council, and Abu Dhabi hosted its first summit in May 1981.

2010

The Burj Khalifa opens

The Burj Khalifa in Dubai opened on 4 January 2010. At 828 m it became the tallest building in the world, a title it still held as of September 2026.

2021

The Hope probe reaches Mars

On 9 February 2021 the UAE's Hope probe, launched from Japan in July 2020, went into orbit around Mars to study its weather and atmosphere.

2025

Faya joins the World Heritage List

UNESCO added the Faya Palaeolandscape in the emirate of Sharjah to its World Heritage List. Stone tools found at Jebel Faya are some of the earliest evidence of modern humans outside Africa.

What people eat in United Arab Emirates

Emirati cooking grew out of three ways of life: Bedouin herders with their camel milk and meat, fishermen of the Gulf, and farmers of the date-palm oases. Trade with India, Persia and East Africa brought rice and spices such as cardamom, saffron, turmeric and dried lime, called loomi. A traditional meal is a big shared platter of spiced rice with meat or fish, and a guest is always welcomed with small cups of Arabic coffee and a plate of dates. In the cities you can eat food from almost every country in the world, and Emirati dishes are easiest to find in heritage restaurants and during Ramadan.

Machboos

The whole Gulf coast, a favourite for family lunches

Rice cooked in a fragrant stock with chicken, lamb, fish or shrimp, spiced with cardamom, cinnamon, turmeric and loomi, the sun-dried lime of the Gulf. It is served on a large platter in the middle of the table.

Harees

All of the Emirates, especially in Ramadan, at Eid and at weddings

Whole wheat and meat, usually chicken or lamb, cooked slowly for hours and then beaten until they melt into a smooth, thick porridge. It is served with a spoonful of melted ghee on top.

Thareed

Across the Emirates, a classic dish in Ramadan

A stew of meat, potatoes, marrow and other vegetables in a spiced tomato broth, ladled over thin pieces of regag bread that soak up the sauce.

Balaleet

The Gulf coast, a favourite for breakfast

Thin vermicelli noodles cooked with sugar, cardamom, rose water and saffron, served with a thin omelette laid over the top. The mix of sweet noodles and savoury egg is the whole point.

Luqaimat

All of the Emirates, at every gathering and in Ramadan

Small balls of yeast batter, flavoured with cardamom and saffron, deep-fried until crisp and golden outside and soft inside, then drizzled with date syrup and sprinkled with sesame seeds.

Khanfaroosh

The Gulf coast, served with tea at family gatherings

Small golden cakes made from eggs, flour, sugar, saffron and cardamom, sometimes with a little rose water. They are fried in oil until puffed and crisp at the edges.

Arabic coffee (gahwa)

The whole Arabian Peninsula; poured for guests in every Emirati home

Lightly roasted coffee boiled with cardamom, and sometimes saffron, served without sugar from a tall pot called a dallah into tiny cups without handles. It is almost always offered with dates.

Karak chai

From the Indian subcontinent; now sold at cafeterias across the Emirates

Black tea boiled hard with milk, sugar and cardamom until strong and creamy. Karak means 'hard' or 'strong'. It came to the Gulf from the Indian subcontinent and is now sold in small cups at cafeterias everywhere.

Dates

The oases of Al Ain and Liwa, and farms across the country

Soft, sticky dates from local palms, served with coffee to every guest and eaten to break the fast in Ramadan. The UAE grows many varieties, such as khalas, khabaizi and lulu.

Camel milk

Bedouin tradition; now sold in supermarkets across the Emirates

Slightly salty, rich milk that once kept desert families alive. Today you can buy it fresh in supermarkets, and also as flavoured milk, ice cream and chocolate.

Shawarma

From the Levant; the favourite quick meal of the Emirates

Thin slices of spiced chicken or lamb carved from a turning spit and rolled in flatbread with garlic sauce, pickles and chips. Small cafeterias sell it late into the night.

Dubai chocolate

Created in Dubai in 2021

A thick milk chocolate bar filled with pistachio and tahini cream and crunchy shreds of kadayif pastry, the flavours of the dessert knafeh.

GOOD MANNERS

At the table

- When you visit an Emirati home you will be offered Arabic coffee and dates. Take and return the small cup with your right hand. Your host will keep refilling it until you gently shake the cup as you hand it back.
- Eat with your right hand, especially when eating from a shared platter.
- Traditional meals are often eaten sitting on the floor around a large platter, taking food from the part in front of you.
- Use only your right hand to pass things, shake hands or hand over a business card; the left hand is considered unclean.

- Pork is not served in most places, and alcohol is served only in licensed hotels, restaurants and bars, never in the emirate of Sharjah.

Machboos

Rice cooked in a fragrant stock with chicken, lamb, fish or shrimp, spiced with cardamom, cinnamon, turmeric and loomi, the sun-dried lime of the Gulf. It is served on a large platter in the middle of the table.

Ingredients

- 1 kg chicken pieces, skin on
- 2 tablespoons ghee or vegetable oil
- 2 onions, sliced
- 3 cloves garlic, crushed
- 2 tomatoes, chopped
- 2 dried limes (loomi), pierced with a knife
- 1 cinnamon stick and 4 cardamom pods
- 1 teaspoon ground turmeric and 1 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1 tablespoon baharat (mixed spice) or a pinch each of black pepper, coriander and cloves
- 400 g basmati rice, washed and soaked for 30 minutes
- 1 litre hot water or chicken stock
- A handful of fresh coriander, and toasted almonds and raisins to serve (optional)

Method

1. Heat the ghee in a large pot and fry the onions until golden. Add the garlic and all the spices and stir for one minute.

2. Add the chicken and turn it in the spices for 5 minutes, then add the tomatoes, dried limes and hot water with a little salt.
3. Cover and simmer for about 35 minutes, until the chicken is cooked through. Lift out the chicken and keep it warm; you can brown it under the grill if you like.
4. Drain the rice and stir it into the stock, which should cover it by about 1 cm. Cook uncovered until the liquid has sunk into the rice, then cover tightly and cook on the lowest heat for 20 minutes.
5. Pile the rice on a large platter, lay the chicken on top and sprinkle with coriander, almonds and raisins.

Harees

Whole wheat and meat, usually chicken or lamb, cooked slowly for hours and then beaten until they melt into a smooth, thick porridge. It is served with a spoonful of melted ghee on top.

Ingredients

- 250 g whole wheat grains (or pearly wheat), soaked overnight
- 500 g lamb or chicken on the bone
- 1.5 litres water
- 1 cinnamon stick
- Salt to taste
- 3 tablespoons ghee, melted, to serve
- A pinch of ground cinnamon or cumin to serve (optional)

Method

1. Drain the wheat. Put the meat, wheat, water and cinnamon stick in a large heavy pot and bring to the boil, skimming off any foam.
2. Cover and cook on a very low heat for 3 to 4 hours, stirring from time to time and adding hot water if it gets too thick, until the wheat is very soft.
3. Take out the bones and the cinnamon stick. Beat the mixture hard with a wooden spoon, or use a hand blender in short bursts, until it becomes a smooth, sticky porridge.

4. Season with salt, spoon into bowls, make a hollow in the middle and pour in the melted ghee. Sprinkle with cinnamon or cumin if you like.

Balaleet

Thin vermicelli noodles cooked with sugar, cardamom, rose water and saffron, served with a thin omelette laid over the top. The mix of sweet noodles and savoury egg is the whole point.

Ingredients

- 200 g thin vermicelli, broken into short pieces
- 2 tablespoons ghee or butter
- 4 tablespoons sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cardamom
- A pinch of saffron soaked in 2 tablespoons warm water
- 1 teaspoon rose water
- 4 eggs, beaten with a pinch of salt and turmeric
- 1 tablespoon oil for the omelette

Method

1. Cook the vermicelli in boiling water for 3 to 4 minutes, until just soft, and drain well.
2. Melt the ghee in a pan, add the sugar and cardamom and stir until the sugar dissolves. Add the vermicelli, the saffron water and the rose water, and toss over a low heat for 3 minutes.
3. In a separate pan, heat the oil and cook the beaten eggs as a thin omelette until fully set, with no runny egg left.
4. Put the sweet vermicelli on a plate and lay the omelette on top. Serve warm.

Luqaimat

Small balls of yeast batter, flavoured with cardamom and saffron, deep-fried until crisp and golden outside and soft inside, then drizzled with date syrup and sprinkled with sesame seeds.

Ingredients

- 250 g plain flour
- 1 tablespoon cornflour
- 1 teaspoon dried yeast
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cardamom
- A pinch of saffron soaked in 2 tablespoons warm water
- About 300 ml warm water
- Vegetable oil for deep frying
- Date syrup or honey, and sesame seeds, to serve

Method

1. Mix the flour, cornflour, yeast, sugar, cardamom and a pinch of salt. Stir in the saffron water and enough warm water to make a thick, smooth batter, a little thicker than pancake batter.
2. Cover and leave in a warm place for about an hour, until it has doubled and is full of bubbles.
3. Heat the oil to about 170 °C in a deep pan, filling it no more than a third full. Drop in small spoonfuls of batter, a few at a time, and fry, turning them, until golden all over.

4. Lift them out onto kitchen paper, drizzle with date syrup and sprinkle with sesame seeds. Eat them warm.

Arabic coffee (gahwa)

Lightly roasted coffee boiled with cardamom, and sometimes saffron, served without sugar from a tall pot called a dallah into tiny cups without handles. It is almost always offered with dates.

Ingredients

- 600 ml water
- 3 tablespoons lightly roasted Arabic coffee, ground
- 1 teaspoon ground cardamom
- A few saffron threads (optional)
- Dates to serve

Method

1. Bring the water to the boil in a small pot, stir in the coffee and let it simmer gently for about 10 minutes.
2. Take it off the heat for a minute so the grounds settle, then add the cardamom and saffron and simmer for 2 minutes more.
3. Let it stand for a few minutes, then pour the clear coffee into a flask or dallah, leaving the grounds behind.
4. Serve a small amount in each little cup, with dates on the side.

Karak chai

Black tea boiled hard with milk, sugar and cardamom until strong and creamy. Karak means 'hard' or 'strong'. It came to the Gulf from the Indian subcontinent and is now sold in small cups at cafeterias everywhere.

Ingredients

- 300 ml water
- 2 heaped teaspoons strong loose black tea
- 3 cardamom pods, lightly crushed
- 150 ml evaporated milk or whole milk
- 2 to 3 teaspoons sugar
- A few saffron threads (optional)

Method

1. Bring the water to the boil with the cardamom and the tea, and let it boil for 3 minutes until very dark.
2. Add the milk, sugar and saffron and bring back to the boil. Let it rise up the pot, lower the heat, and repeat two or three times.
3. Strain into small cups and drink hot.
